

The River Mile

A Natural Resource Career Day

October 7, 2015

10:00 to 12:35ish

This career skills day is designed to introduce high school students (9th-12th grade) participating in The River Mile to STEM careers in natural resources. This unique “career fair” is designed to be the first step towards an internship and future career with the National Park Service or other natural resource agency. Learn career and job skills that students could use in working with their outdoor classrooms and to learn more about career options in natural resources.

Each presenter will share some of the most intriguing aspects of their job with the entire group (in one minute) and then provide hands-on/minds-on experience to small groups.

The goal for this experience is for students to experience and be trained in some activity or skill they would need if they came and worked for you in your job, division or our agency. This is a time for students to have a hands-on experience with natural resources and natural resource agency activities so they can get a feel for it, see if they like it or maybe use those skills in a project they or their class is working on.
